Key Notes

Wednesday

Key Note Lecture: Patrick McCurdy

Comics, Collision, and Communication: Wrestling with The Beast

This lecture tackles conference themes through the lens of The Beast: Making a Living on a Dying Planet, a graphic novel set in Alberta, Canada that tells the story of two millennials – Mary & Callum – living in the heart of Canada's oil country and working on opposite sides of a media firestorm. Born from academic research into the contentious mediatized debate surrounding Canada’s oil/tar sands, ‘The Beast’ was published as a critical reflection on the bifurcated state of energy discourse. Drawing from the comic’s content, as well as from the collaborative process of its creation, ‘The Beast’ is discussed from three perspectives. First, as a public intervention in the mediated struggle over the representation of energy futures. Second, as a research project made possible through academic collision and collaboration. Third, the talk focuses on ‘The Beast’ of academia: the unwieldy domain of media and communications and how challenging the field creates new opportunities for research and understanding.

Patrick McCurdy (PhD) is an Associate Professor in the Department of Communication, University of Ottawa. His research draws from environmental communication, media theory and social movement studies to examine media as a site and source of social struggle and contestation. Patrick is a Core Member of the University of Ottawa’s Institute for Science, Society and Policy, and a member of Sustainable Canada Dialogues, a network of Canadian scholars working towards Canada’s transition to a low-carbon energy economy.

Thursday

Key Note Lecture: Anja Bechmann

Social Media and Collective Behavior

In her lecture Anja Bechmann will provide an overview of how she has been investigating collective behavior in social media during the last seven years using large-scale trace data primarily from Facebook. In her lecture Bechmann will conceptualize the collective on social media drawing on a pragmatism, STS and network theory inspired theoretical framework. Through trace data studies she will present findings on inequality, filter bubbles and (ongoing work on) disinformation that have been described as some of the challenges in algorithmic scripted communication spaces facilitating collective behaviors and the potential manipulation there of by powerful and strategic actors. In this context she will also include methodological discussions on social big data ethics and conflicting values in the research work. An important element in studying collective behavior is applied artificial intelligence or machine learning models both as an element in the design work behind the optimization of the algorithms facilitating the object of study, and as important models in the analytical process of detecting such collective patterns in the data. Bechmann’s recent work thus discusses the need to control the work with AI more, outlining models for documentation needed in order to install effective governing procedures for explainable, accountable and fair AI.

Anja Bechmann is Professor at the Department of Media and Journalism Studies at Aarhus University in Denmark where she serves as chair of the research program in Media, Communication and Society and as Director of DATALAB (Center for Digital Social Research). She conducts multidisciplinary research at the intersection between algorithms and media sociology er work has been published in several academic journals as well as in various edited volumes at Routledge and MIT Press.
Friday

Challenging the field

Moderator:
Lars Mogensen

Lars Mogensen is a free-lance journalist, mainly working with programs about current affairs and philosophy for Swedish Public Radio (SR). As a professional moderator and radio anchor man, he will lead the discussions of the conference theme Communication, Creativity and Imagination, and indeed spur the panllists on to Challenge the Field.

Key Note Panel:
Leonardo Custodio, Raul Ferrer Conill, Bente Kalsnes, Maria Murumaa-Mengel, Kristian Møller.

Leonardo Custodio is a Brazilian post-doctoral fellow at the Institute for Advanced Social Research at Tampere University. He is also the co-coordinator of the Anti-Racism Media Activism Alliance, a three-year project funded by the Kone Foundation. Previously, Custodio researched media activism in the favelas of Rio de Janeiro. His current research and project focus on how people who suffer from racism use available media technologies to raise their voices and act against racism in Finland and Brazil. This research came out as a book "Favela Media Activism: Counterpublics for Human Rights in Brazil" (2017).

Raul Ferrer-Conill is a lecturer and researcher in media and communications at Karlstad University. His doctoral dissertation investigated the use of gamification in digital news production. His research interests cover journalism, digital forms of engagement, and processes of datafication. He has published his work in journals such as Journalism Studies, Digital Journalism, and Television and New Media.

Bente Kalsnes is Associate Professor at the Department of Journalism and Media Studies at the Oslo Metropolitan University. Her main research areas are media innovation, social media, political communication and information disorder. She received her Ph.D. from the University of Oslo with the dissertation: "The power of likes: Social media logic and political communication" (2016).

Maria Murumaa-Mengel (PhD in media and communication) is a social media lecturer and the program manager of journalism and communication at the Institute of Social Studies, University of Tartu. She is involved in research focusing mainly on young people’s use of social media, digital literacies and the transformation of private and public in online spaces. More specifically, her most recent research has looked into how young people construct and navigate the online-intimate; how online risks and opportunities are changing everyday practices of youth. She has published work in Young: Nordic Journal of Youth Research, International Review of Information Ethics and First Monday, and is a member of AoIR, ECREA, IAMCR, ICA and the EU Kids Online network.

Kristian Møller is a postdoc at the IT University of Copenhagen studying the intersection of media technology and LGBTQ sexuality and culture. His Ph.D. The mediatization of intimacy details the role of dating/hook-up apps in gay men’s everyday lives, intertwining media theory with critical concepts of affect and intimacy. Current work centers on drug and media use in queer male sex practices typically referred to as “chemsex”. His work is embedded in the research project "Medicine Man: Media assemblages of medicalized masculinity".

Media literacy is now taking its place as a focus for policy in every arena, since it is a proactive approach that governments can take to enhancing capacity and sustaining democratic decision-making. Now, the challenge for policy-makers is to meet the human and institutional resource needs for media literacy, to be able to introduce and support media literacy at all levels of society: a challenge that governments are just beginning to recognize and address. We are at the beginning of an exciting yet cautionary time for fulfilling the promise of media literacy education for civil society.

Special session: ECREA roundtable: Stakeholder collaboration in audience research: Moving from why to how.
Chair: David Mathieu
Panelists: Göran Bolin, Pille Pruulmann-Vengerfeldt, Pille Runnel and Kim Schröder

Engaging in collaboration with stakeholders is an important but controversial consideration in our field, given that our interests in audience knowledge are shaped around different and sometimes conflicting stakes. This roundtable takes existing conversations (Lazarsfeld’s intervention on critical and administrative research, COST Action TATS’s work on stakeholder collaboration, CEDAR’s stakeholder consultation) further by focusing on the how of stakeholder collaboration, rather than the why. In a research environment characterized by data abundance, yet also by opacity, stakeholder collaboration has become a ‘sensitive necessity’.
